One Phase of the Strike.

There is one phase of the telegraphic strike which the officers of the Western Union have probably not taken into consideration, and that is the fact that the struggle between the company and their employees has attracted public attention to telegraphic affairs more than ever before, and will result in a strong pressure upon the next Congress for a postal telegraph system. There is but one power strong enough to cope with such rich monopolies as the Western Union Telegraph Company, and that is the mailed hand of the National Government. A well settled conviction rests upon the minds of a large class of intelligent people, who are neither communists nor socialists, that the Government should own and control the railways and telegraph lines, precisely as it does the mail carrying system. Doubtless there are dangers in and objections to such a centralization of power in the National Government; but with such a strict civil service system as might be devised and carried into effect, as would prevent the employment or discharge of men for political reasons, those dangers could be avoided. The Western Union people will find the postal telegraph scheme looming up in the next Congress in tremendous proportions, and its strength will be greatly enhanced by the present strike. The could better afford to pay the advance asked by their employees than to come into competition with a rival which all their wealth cannot purchase nor drive from the field.—[Bodie Free Press.

Senate Committee on Labor.

NEW YORK, August 3.—The United States Senate Committee on the question of labor will begin hearing of testimony regarding the telegraphers' strike in room one hundred of the Postoffice building, next Monday, at ten o'clock. The following practical telegraphers have been summoned to appear before the Committee: John Campbell, Master Workman of the Telegraphers' Brotherhood; Harry W. Orr of Philadelphia; John S. McClelland, Secretary of the General Executive Committee of the Knights of Labor; Eugene G. O'Connor of Boston; John Mitchell and John H. Lallavalle of this city; Thomas O'Rielly of London, England; A. H. Beyman, formerly Manager of the Mutual Union Telegraph Company, and several lady operators. Among those subpoenaed from the Western Union Company are General Eckert, Jay Gould, Albert B. Chandler and James Gamble.

Swimming Against the Current.
NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Norris Taylor, calling himself the English swimmer, who recently tried to swim from Albany to New York on the Hudson River in six days, will attempt to beat against the current next week, this time starting Sunday night from New York and going to Albany. The reason for this change of plan is that his former trial has warned him that the wind generally blows up the Hudson and the last attempt he had to fight for three days against a head wind. His misfortunes were crowned by sunstroke, cramp and chill, which compelled him to leave the water at Tarrytown, after swimming fifty miles.

The Santa Fe Exposition.
SANTA FE, N. M., August 3.—A quiet day at the Terti-Millennial Exposition and but few in attendance, owing to the threatening weather. Among visitors were Judge T. S. Parvin, Grand Recorder of the Grand Lodge Knights Templar. He left last night for San Francisco, accompanied by several Knights and Hon. J. M. Parvin of Mexico.

This is the way the Bee views the commercial prosperity of a sagebrush metropolis: "Carson City must be sitting on the ragged edge of a coming boom. One of the demi-monde the other night playfully cracked a sister on the head with a champagne bottle. In dull times the 'ladies' of that burg are very lucky if they can find an empty gin bottle to use as a weapon. When they use a champagne bottle so recklessly, it is a sure sign of approaching prosperity."
